

QUESTION

During a patient's admission to the hospital, the nurse notices that the patient is unable to perform activities of daily living. The nurse reports this to the physician. The physician orders the following: "Assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living. Report any changes to the physician." The nurse knows that the physician is concerned about the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living. The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living.

ANSWER

The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living. The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living. The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living. The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living.

QUESTION

The nurse is caring for a patient who is unable to perform activities of daily living. The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living.

QUESTION

ANSWER

The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living. The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living. The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living. The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living.

QUESTION

The nurse is caring for a patient who is unable to perform activities of daily living. The nurse should assess the patient's ability to perform activities of daily living.