ASSEMBLY

GENERAL SETUP

1. Fasten the Recoil 360° belt around your waist. Tighten by looping the adjustable belt through the square rings and firmly pressing the hook and loop fastener together. The belt should lay flat for the free-motion ring to operate smoothly.

NOTE: The Recoil 360° belt should fit snugly around the waist without restricting movement.

2. Attach one or both ends of the bungee by clipping the attached metal carabiner to the free-motion ring on the Recoil 360° belt.
3. Secure the other end of the bungee by having a partner place their hand through the partner handle and cinch down comfortably.

NOTE: Partner should start in a base stance with feet staggered and both hands holding the strap so there is no slack, but no stretch.

OPTIONAL SOLO SETUP

1. Anchor the end of the bungee by cinching the partner handle to a stationary point. A stationary point is any structure that is completely stable. Anchor point should be at the same level as your waist or lower.

CAUTION: Prior to beginning any exercise check to verify all carabiners are in the engaged and locked position; during use continue to check and verify 100% carabiner engagement. The Recoil 360° should not be stretched more than 20 feet. The Recoil 360° bungee is not meant to be maximally loaded. Running, sprinting or shuffling until the bungee is completely stretched is not the proper use of this training tool. It may also result in injury or equipment failure.
