

PROBATION

Probation is a court-ordered period of supervision in the community as an alternative to incarceration. It is typically used for first-time offenders or those with minor offenses. The probation officer monitors the individual's behavior and ensures they comply with the terms of their probation, such as attending counseling, maintaining employment, and avoiding further legal issues. Failure to comply can result in the revocation of probation and a return to prison.

Probation is a court-ordered period of supervision in the community as an alternative to incarceration. It is typically used for first-time offenders or those with minor offenses. The probation officer monitors the individual's behavior and ensures they comply with the terms of their probation, such as attending counseling, maintaining employment, and avoiding further legal issues. Failure to comply can result in the revocation of probation and a return to prison.

KINGSTON

