

PROBATION

Probation is a court-ordered period of supervision in the community as an alternative to incarceration. It is typically used for first-time offenders or those with minor offenses. Probation officers monitor the offender's behavior, ensure compliance with court orders, and provide support and resources. Failure to comply with probation conditions can result in revocation and incarceration.

Probation is a court-ordered period of supervision in the community as an alternative to incarceration. It is typically used for first-time offenders or those with minor offenses. Probation officers monitor the offender's behavior, ensure compliance with court orders, and provide support and resources. Failure to comply with probation conditions can result in revocation and incarceration.

KINGSTON

