

PROBATION

Probation is a period of supervision for individuals who have been convicted of a crime but are not sentenced to prison. It is often used as an alternative to incarceration for first-time offenders or those with minor offenses. Probation officers monitor the individual's behavior and ensure they comply with the conditions of their sentence, such as attending counseling, maintaining employment, and staying out of trouble with the law. Failure to comply can result in the individual being sent to prison.

REENTRY

Reentry refers to the process of returning to a country after having been deported or removed. It is a complex process that involves applying for a visa or other form of entry permission. Reentry is often subject to strict conditions and may require the individual to provide evidence of their rehabilitation and ability to support themselves. Some individuals may face additional challenges, such as being placed on a reentry watchlist or being denied entry altogether.
