

The Committee on the State of the Economy was established in 1994 to provide a forum for discussion and debate on the state of the economy and the role of the government. The Committee is composed of members from the public, private sector, and academia. The Committee's mandate is to identify key economic issues and to provide recommendations to the government.

The Committee has held several public hearings and has published several reports. The Committee's reports have focused on a range of issues, including the state of the economy, the role of the government, and the impact of globalization. The Committee's reports have been widely read and have influenced government policy.

The Committee's most recent report, "The State of the Economy: A Report to the Government," was published in 1997. This report provides a comprehensive overview of the state of the economy and offers a range of recommendations for government action. The report is available on the Committee's website.
