

SMALL, BUT MIGHTY IN MONTEREY

WINDSTREAM

ABOUT THE BRAND

Windstream was inspired by the constant winds and fog of the Santa Lucia Highlands. The wines that are produced in this chilly climate best capture the region's distinctive terroir.

WINEMAKING TEAM

The maritime influence of the Pacific Ocean creates morning fog and afternoon winds: an ideal climate for the production of world-class Burgundian varietals. This "stream of winds" directly affects the Sarmiento Vineyard, which is located in the prestigious Santa Lucia Highlands appellation of Monterey. The soil is well-drained loamy sand with many pea-sized cobblestones. Fourth generation winemaker Anthony Riboli employs traditional techniques and modern technology to create wines that express ripe fruit flavors with balance and finesse.

COVETED SOURCING REGION

Wine.com has called the Santa Lucia Highlands, "Perhaps the most highly regarded appellation within Monterey County." This region sees a combination of warm morning sunshine and brisk afternoon breezes with a reliable daily blanket of fog that allows the grapes to ripen slowly and fully. The result is concentrated, flavorful wines that retain their natural acidity.

KEY SELLING POINTS

- Santa Lucia Highlands is one of the most prestigious regions for Chardonnay and Pinot Noir in California.
- Soil diversity is so extreme that vineyard blocks commonly contain several different soil types, yielding rich and dynamic flavors to the grapes.
- The cold, deep Monterey Bay constantly influences this region with cool winds and heavy fog.
