

Geographical Information Systems

Geographical Information Systems (GIS) are computer systems that capture, store, manipulate, analyze, and display spatial data.

Input Data	Output Data

GIS applications include urban planning, environmental management, and transportation analysis.

LINGSTON

Map of LINGSTON showing the road network and the highlighted area.